THE BULKLEY-NECHAKO

Centrally located in British Columbia between Prince George and Prince Rupert, the Bulkley-Nechako contains over seventy-three thousand square kilometers of wilderness recreation. The region is an outdoor enthusiast's paradise.

This activity guide provides a snapshot of what this amazing region has to offer. From the snow-capped peaks of the Skeena and Babine Mountain Ranges to the endless rolling hills of the Nechako Valley, the opportunities are as varied as the landscape.

In the pages of this guide, you will find the top picks for the Bulkley-Nechako's most popular activities. Check out our website at www.visitbulkleynechako.ca for more information and directions to the listed activities, accommodations (including hundreds of free camping spots), local events and services. Using our Bulkley-Nechako Discovery App, you can access a personalized adventure guide for any month of the year. If you are on the road, pop into any of the Visitor Information Centres located in the region's communities for further information or directions.

While the top picks are included, we encourage you to step off the beaten track. The Bulkley Valley, which includes Smithers, Telkwa, and Houston, is a hub for sports fishing, mountaineering, skiing, and snowboarding. The Lakes District, which includes the communities of Burns Lake, Fraser Lake, and Granisle, has over 300 lakes, exceptional fishing, and world-class mountain biking trails. The Nechako Valley, encompassing Fort St James and Vanderhoof, abounds in BC and Dakelh First Nation's history, remote fishing resorts, outfitter lodges, and hiking opportunities.

The Bulkley Nechako offers rich and vibrant cultural experiences, and while we have included many of the festivals, local First Nations events, community events, community markets and galleries, there is simply so much more in the region to discover.

FORT ST. JAMES Sowchea, Dickinson Loop

BACK COUNTRY SAFETY

Hiking Boots or Athletic Shoes: Make sure to choose footwear that will keep you safe on the trails.

Water: Always carry water with you while hiking. Keep in mind that fluid loss is heightened in winter and summer. Carry a water filter and/or purification tablets.

Navigation: Bring a physical waterproof/tear resistant trail map and a compass. Learn how to use these tools before you head out.

Food: Pack enough food for your trip and then add a little more. A reasonable goal is 0.5-1.5kg (or 2,500 to 4,500 calories) per person per day, depending on your size and exertion level. Great trail options include fruit, nuts, energy bars, trail mix, granola, jerky, and chocolate.

Sunscreen and Insect Repellent: Apply regularly to protect yourself. Even on cloudy days, exposed skin can lead to sunburns. SPF 30 is recommended.

10 Essentials when in the Backcountry

Rain Gear and Extra Clothing: Be prepared for changing weather. Take a rain jacket and dress in layers. Avoid cotton base layers as cotton traps water against your skin and is slow to dry. Choose synthetic fabrics when possible.

First Aid Kit: Choose a compact and weatherproof first aid kit. Know how to use each item. Make sure to ask all of your backcountry party members if they have any allergies or conditions.

Headlamp and Flashlight: A small headlamp or flashlight will be useful if you find yourself on the trail after sunset. Carry an extra set of batteries.

Matches or Lighter: In an emergency, you may need to keep yourself or someone else warm until help arrives. Carry matches in a waterproof container.

Tools: A knife is an important tool to carry when hiking. A physical list of emergency numbers for the area and a lightweight emergency blanket can also be useful additions to your pack.
